

Communicate to inspire

One of the biggest challenges in the work environment today is for managers and leaders to create teams that perform, are aligned to the organisation and committed to their roles. It is an intrinsic part of being a successful leader that you communicate well with teams. The Communicating to Inspire workshop gives managers the confidence to use tools and practiced techniques that will enable them to communicate more effectively with their team. It considers the need to communicate effectively in groups as well as the things that make a difference on a one on one basis. Managers will come away from the workshop energised and ready to Communicate to Inspire.

Who should participate

- Managers and team leaders that want to reach new heights of team performance
- Business owners who have people to manage
- Executive who want to have a voice with their peers and leaders
- Newly promoted managers who are recognising the need to influence different people in different ways

Learning outcomes

- Techniques to use to communicate effectively in both groups and one on one situations
- Understanding how to recognise and use different communication styles
- How to adapt your style for more effect
- How to build trust and be authentic
- How to communicate in a way that inspires
- How to involve the team in discussion

The lasting difference

- Increased personal and team success
- Aligned and performing teams
- Increased skill to communicate in different ways
- An ongoing awareness of your own communication style
- More thought and time given to preparing the important communications

If you manage teams and recognise that your communication makes a difference to the teams' performance, contact Kandula to learn new techniques to communicate.