

Coaching for the communication professional

As a communication professional your role no doubt encompasses a range of activities – some of which will come naturally and others may be new and complex.

Often you are expected to take on new challenges with little support around you. Being the communication manager in a company is often a lonely role; so having someone to call on who understands the challenges you are facing and has insights to share may prevent you from sleepless nights and unrequired pressure.

Kandula offer coaching specifically for communication professionals to address the unique challenges of the role.

Do you face situations where....

- You have to influence others to show value in your role
- You have to give recommendations
- You need to be seen as the expert on a range of difference aspects of communication
- You are being pulled in different directions and expected to deliver

Would you like

- Someone to bounce your ideas around with
- Advise on how to deal with specific situations
- Tried and tested techniques & templates
- Access to the experience of others

How we do it

Kandula's coaching for the communication professional helps you as you juggle all aspects of your role. It may be that you have something specific that you want to discuss, so just a couple of coaching sessions is enough. Alternatively you may want to commit to a 6 – 10 session program as you adapt in to your role and face many different challenges.

Whatever the situation we will create a coaching approach that fits.

The lasting difference

- Confidence in dealing with a range of different challenges
- Tools, tips and techniques to use time and time again
- Increased respect from those around you as you achieve results in your role

Whether you are new in to a role, or facing difficulties implementing your plans, a Kandula coach will energise your approach and actions. Contact us at Kandula to learn more about our coaching